Lauer conducts a small grocery and provision store on Seventh street extended, near Rock Creek road. On the night of May 2 his place was raided by the police, and a considerable quantity of beer, whisky and other intoxicating beverages captured.

The stock, consisting of about a dozen cases of lager and several demijohns, was brought into court and the room was given the appearance of a saloon, in which Processor of Pugh acted as barkeeper. Considerable amisement was caused by the testing of the liquors by the court officers.

Lauer was defended by Lawyer Lipscomb, who, was particularly bitter in his denunciation of the officers who made the raid. None of the government winesses could be induced to admit that they had purchased liquor in the place.

Mr. Lipscomb set up the defense that Lauer had a large number of boarders, and keeps the beer for their use at meals, as a sale could not be proved, the court charged the jury to render a verdict of not guilty, which was done. This afternoon Inspector Holimberger sent telegrams to every station, town and village on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Raliroad, giving a perfect description of Irving L. Ford.

"Now that we have conclusive proof against him," said the inspector, "we will leave no stone unturned to capture him. We have had an uphili fight and a hard one in this matter. The men have worked night and day, but we will land our man."

Detectives Weedon and Horne were in telegraphic communication with headquarters all day, but up to a late hour this afternoon the tidings of Ford's arrest had not been received here.

Attitudal important information connecting Ford with the crime was secured today by the detectives.

A warrant for Ford's arrest was issued at the police court this morning. This was to give the detectives a basis to work upon, and to bring about the negro's return to this city in case he is arrested in the adjoining counties of Maryland or Virginia.

It was reported here this afternoon that Ford had come to Washington, and the precincts were furnished with his description, while the entire police force is on the lookout for him.

DENIED WIFE AND CHILD

Insurance Solicitor Ross Arrested and Taken to Brooklyn.

Fouching Scene at Jersey City When His Child Kissed Him-Was Identified by a Mole on His Cheek-Held for Fraud, But Still Declares He Is Not the Man Wanted.

William A. Ross, also known as William Rose, and Reulen Cross, formerly an agent of the Prudential Insurance Company, of this city, is behind the bars in Brookly, N. Y., upon several charges of fraud. Ross is well known in insurance circles here and in Alexandria, where he has influential friends, and his arrest was only accomplished after hard work by the detectives.

The confession of his guilt came last Mon-day, in Jersey City, when he methis wife and child, whom he had deserted and strenuously denied.

About six months ago a business-like man, plainly dressed, applied to George L. Huntzinger, superintenient of the Prudential Insurance Company, in this city. He gave the name of William A. Ross, and showed he had thorough experience in insurance details.

to have been away from there any length of time without it being known.

He offered to obtain statements from prominent Alexamirians that they knew of ms movements during the last year in order to prove an alibi.

His stout denial pozzled Mr. Huntzinger, but the latter finally directed Ross to secure a statement. This the accused man did, and some days later he offered Mr. Huntzinger a letter from a wealthy effizien of Alexandria, stating that he had known Ross for eight years, and during the last year be had not been a way from Alexandria at any time during the year over a week at a time.

Some time later Mr. Huntzinger received a letter stating that the wife of the man known as kose and Cross insisted that the Washington man was her husband, and said his fittle child, dying of consumption, cried a good deat for her father and wanted him to return. The wife stated that her husband's real name was Reuben Ross of Brooklyn.

Mr. Huntzinger called Ross into his office and said:

"You are Reuben Ross of Brooklyn. You have a wife, and a child dying of consumption, who cries for you all the time."

Ross' face remained unchanged and he still denied that he was related to the woman and child.

Mr. Huntzinger then wrote to Mrs. Ross for a more complete description of the husband. She replied that he had a mole on the right side of his nose.

The mole settled it.

Ross of Washington was the Ross of Brooklyn, because the former had a mole on the right side of his nose.

Still, when questioned. Ross denied that he had ever been in Brooklyn, and voluntered to go and have pictures taken to send the weman for identification.

Two pictures were taken, but while Mr. Huntzinger was absent Ross slipped into into the plotographer's and requested the mole becliminated from the print.

Suspecting something like this Mr. Huntzinger questioned the photographer, the result being that two prints were made without the mole and two negatives taken with the tellulae dark spot.

All were sent to Mrs. Ross, who completely identified the mole and the man as part and parcel of het husband.

The American Surety Company at once sent a detective here and Ross was taken on Monday to New York. He made no objection to going, protesting always his innocence.

UNDERWRITERS IN COUNCIL. Annual Meeting of the Southeastern

Tariff Association. The fifteenth annual meeting of the outheastern Tariff Association was called to order today at 12 o'clock by its president, Mr. Thomas Egleston, in the ban-quet hall of the Shoreham. There is an unusually large attendance, something over 100 members being present, besides a large delegation of visiting general and local agents from all parts of the South, officials of prominent fire insurance companies and insurance journalists.

The first several hours of the session were occupied with the president's annual address, the report of Secretary and Treasurer Fleming, and the usual preliminary outine matters.

routine matters.

President Egieston, in his address, referred more or less briefly to all the matters of leading interest, reviewed the work of the association during the past year, and spoke hopefully of its future. Among the matters discussed by him were memberships, the general tariff, policy clauses and transfers, legislation affecting insurance companies in the several States, violations of rates and rules. Boorporated companies of rates and rules. Incorporated companies acting as local agents and other subjects of less interest to the fraternity and local in their nature. Speaking of State legislation, he said:

"I regret to say that since the last an-regret to say that since the last annual meeting several of the States within our jurisdiction have enacted laws prejudicial to your interests and to those of the insuring public. These laws produce but one result-increased losses and expenses. The only remedy is to increase rates enough to meet this further demand upon your resources. My observation is that these bills have not originated from anyactofthisassociation, but are invariably introduced by some disgruntled persons who, taking advantage of the popular clamor just now prevailing against all corporations, strive to place additional burdens upon insurance companies."

The report of the secretary was confined principally to a record of events at various localities, and incorporating an article written by Mr. Schoen, the electrician of the association.

Among the leading insurance visitors may be mentioned President C. B. Whiting, of the Orient, A. W. Damon, president of the Springfield Fire and Marinet R. D. Benson, president of the Pennsylvania; Vice President Yarnell, of the Delaware; Secretary Royce, of the Hartford; Major L. Misso, manager of the Greenwich, and Assistant Manager Clarke, of the Phoenix.

Among the insurance journalists are Messrs, Ransom of the Boston Standard, Jenney of the New York Underwriter, and Messrs. Ransom of the Boston Standard, Jenney of the New York Underwriter, and Allison and Gilken of the Louisville Herald. QUITE TOO GAY WERE THEY

Why the Ludy Barber Departure Did Not Succeed in This City-How Substitutes Were Obtained.

They were too gay. William Leo, the proprietor of the recent lady barber shop, said yesterday that this was the reason why the Washington lady was the reason why the Washington lady barbers had gone to Chicago.

The sign "Lady Barbers" no longer remains in gilt letters over the door, and the many friends whom Julia and Dora made will know them no more, unless they are delegates to the Chicago convention.

In the opinion of Mr. Leo, the Chicago female shaver is not a success in Washington. Bis shop is now served by men barbers.

"Well, I advertised in The Times, and whenever I do I get what I want. On Saturday night I had the men and I dismissed all the others at once."

There was one of the lady barbers, however, who was not included in Mr. Leo's estimate, namely, Mrs. Tony Bonavires, who married the foreman of the shop and who is now a resident of this city. Mrs. Bonavires is quite the lady in all respects.

Dora and Julia chewed gum, and it is aid that they also taught the two Wash ington apprentices to masticate and talk Chicago slang with volume and volubility. Mr. Leo said that the girls behaved very well while he was around, but that he had been informed that things went wild in his absence.

It is said that they got more in tips than in wages, without at all discredit-ing the amount of wages.

These lady barbers also introduced the barbershop etiquette of calling gentlemen by their first names, and a great many of their customers were young men who had more first names than hair on their face. This kind of humanity is still lamenting the Has gind of normanity is still lamenting the hasty exodus of the Chicago surgeons.

Washington is not yet ripe for the woman with the razor. It can stand a woman with a past, and a woman with a future. It can stand a woman on wheels and with a man's pants on, and it can stand a woman with wheels of any kind. It can stand a woman on her head and leave the "balance" to her, but it evidently can't stand a cult that
